

STARMEN DESIGN GROUP SWEEPS HORIZON INTERACTIVE AWARDS WITH MULTIPLE WINS

HOLLYWOOD, CA- STARMEN announced today that they've earned 4 awards in the 11th annual Horizon Interactive Awards.

The international competition is open to digital media professionals around the world, and this year received thousands of entries from 25 countries. Horizon prides itself on its unique approach to judging: panelists aren't just design experts, but rather a diverse group of people in the media industry with varying skillsets and capabilities.

STARMEN Creative Director Antony Wiktor said, "We're thrilled because these awards recognize that great design doesn't just look good - it has to function and serve a purpose. Implementing creative solutions is part of our process."

J/P Haitian Relief Organization took home a gold award in the Advocacy/ Nonprofit Website category. J/P HRO provides relief efforts and emergency services in Haiti.

John Foley, Inc. provides high performance training to individuals, teams, and organizations, and scored STARMEN a bronze statue in the Business to Business/ Corporate Website category.

Honored in the Self Promotion Website category was STARMEN's own portfolio, receiving a gold award. Executive Director Armen David said, "Considering the level of talent and caliber of work we were competing against, it's a privilege to receive this recognition."

The awards continue a winning streak for the Hollywood-based agency, which took home 12 W3 Awards and Davey Awards for excellence in website design and development in 2012.

STARMEN Design Group creates brand identities, marketing strategies, websites and other digital media for a diverse array of clients, ranging from fashion to entertainment, food/beverage to non-profit.
